

CEFR B1, or

the intermediate level

Intermediate level

- You can understand and use familiar phrases and expressions to communicate on familiar topics,
- Handle most travel situations, and
- Write simple connected texts about your experiences and interests.
- At this level, you can understand clear standard speech and
- the main points of clear standard information.

Understanding

- You can grasp the main points of clear, standard conversations and texts on everyday topics like work, personal life, and current events.

Speaking

- You can enter into conversations on familiar subjects, connect phrases to describe experiences, and give reasons for your opinions.

Listening

- You can understand the main points of clear standard speech on familiar matters.

Reading

- You can understand texts that are mainly composed of high-frequency, everyday language or job-related language.

Writing

- You can write simple, connected text on topics that are familiar or of personal interest, such as personal letters describing experiences.

Independence

- You can deal with most situations likely to arise while travelling and maintain simple conversation.

Travel

- You can handle most travel situations in an area where the language is spoken.

Everyday Life

- You can cope flexibly with problems in everyday life, such as navigating less routine public transport situations.

Conversation

- You can converse on topics that are familiar, of personal interest, or relevant to everyday life.

Professional Contexts

- You can make professional phone calls and write professional emails.

What You Can Expect to Do at B1 Level

There are six levels of language proficiency (A1, A2, B1, B2, C1, C2) according to the CEFR scale.

They are grouped into three broader levels:

A1-A2 (Basic User),

B1-B2 (Independent User), and

C1-C2 (Proficient User).

How to Achieve B1 Level

- Study: You generally need about 350-400 hours of study to reach this level, which includes classes and self-study.
- Practice: Regularly practice reading, writing, listening, and speaking to reinforce your knowledge and build a strong foundation.
- Vocabulary: Aim to build a vocabulary of around 2500-3000 words.